Contextualizing the Work Within Plath's Life and Era

Written predominantly during the 1950s, a period marked by post-war societal shifts and constrained gender roles, Plath's work embodies the tensions of her time. The stories in "Johnny Panic and the Bible of Dreams" capture a sense of alienation and psychological distress against a backdrop of institutional control, notably the psychiatric hospital setting in the title story. Her narrative approach anticipates later developments in confessional and psychological literature.

Causes and Influences Behind the Work
