Contextualizing the 2013 Edition

The early 2010s were characterized by increased maritime competition, with emerging naval powers investing heavily in fleet expansion and modernization. The 2013 edition reflects this reality, documenting significant growth in Asia-Pacific navies, particularly China's People's Liberation Army Navy, which was rapidly acquiring modern destroyers and submarines. Meanwhile, traditional naval powers like the United States and the United Kingdom faced budgetary constraints, leading to strategic recalibrations.
