Contextual Background

Written shortly after World War II, Confessions of a Mask emerges from a period of profound transformation in Japan. The protagonist's clandestine homosexuality must be understood within this milieu, where conformity was paramount and deviation often met with ostracism.

Psychological and Identity Conflict

The novel's core lies in the protagonist's psychological turmoil as he navigates his sexual identity amidst repression. Mishima portrays this through the metaphor of the 'mask'—a symbol of societal facade and self-protection. This intertwining of personal and political identities enriches the narrative's complexity.

Literary Techniques and Narrative Voice

The confessional first-person narration provides immediacy and intimacy, drawing readers deeply into the protagonist's psyche.
