To fully appreciate 'Things Fall Apart,' it is essential to understand the historical context in which it was written. Achebe was born in 1930, during a time when Nigeria was under British colonial rule. The Igbo people, to whom Achebe belonged, had a rich cultural heritage that was increasingly under threat from colonial policies and Christian missionary activities. Achebe's novel captures this tension, portraying the Igbo society as a complex and vibrant culture that is disrupted by the arrival of colonialists.

The novel's title, taken from W.B. Yeats' poem 'The Second Coming,' is a poignant commentary on the collapse of traditional Igbo society. Achebe uses this metaphor to explore the devastating impact of colonialism on African communities, highlighting the

Achebe's Literary Techniques and Themes

Achebe's writing is characterized by its rich cultural detail, powerful storytelling, and deep philosophical insights.
